

2022 is the Year of Workplace Culture: Challenges and Revolutionizing the Workplace

Description:

A new year offers employers the opportunity to reflect on how their organization has adapted to recent challenges. It's also the perfect time to reimagine workplace culture. That's because employers have struggled to recruit and retain top talent in recent months. And according to a new report from Glassdoor, the tight labor market trends will continue into 2023.

One key to winning the war for top talent is a renewed focus on company culture. The organizations that succeed will rethink employee engagement and develop an employee-centric work environment. This panel will discuss emerging trends, challenges in today's markets and their strategies to address the challenges in an everchanging world.
